

Arman Shaikenov is one of post-Soviet's foremost legal scholars and practitioners, with more than two decades of experience in civil law, constitutional law, and jurisprudence. His career combines high-level practice and academic excellence. As counsel and partner in leading Kazakh law firms and during his tenure at McGuireWoods, an international law firm renowned for cross-border work, he represented the Republic of Kazakhstan in major international arbitrations under the LCIA, AAA, and SCC Rules. His expertise in post-Soviet law and contract theory made him a pivotal figure in those proceedings.

Beyond practice, Arman has built a distinguished academic career, teaching civil law, contract law, Roman law, and jurisprudence. His courses—ranging from Gai Institutiones to Modern Theory of Jurisprudence—are regarded among the most rigorous and respected in Kazakhstan. He is a frequent lecturer, author, and mentor to the next generation of legal professionals.

Arman is Co-Founder and Board Member of the Chamber of Legal Advisers “IUSTUS,” where he previously chaired the Attestation Commission responsible for the qualification of legal advisers. He has advised clients in complex cross-border transactions and subsoil-use projects worth hundreds of millions of US dollars and has successfully represented them before all levels of Kazakh courts, including the Supreme Court.

He graduated summa cum laude from the Kazakh State Law University, Faculty of Business Law (1997). Arman is fluent in English, Russian, and Ukrainian.
