

Dina Berkaliyeva is one of Kazakhstan's most experienced regulatory and disputes lawyers, with over twenty-five years of practice in natural resources, environmental, and administrative litigation. She has acted for leading international corporations, state bodies, and major energy and infrastructure companies in high-stakes disputes before Kazakh courts, including the Supreme Court of the Republic of Kazakhstan, as well as before the AIFC Court.

Her experience spans tax, customs, environmental and subsoil-use litigation, and complex administrative-offence cases. Dina's clients include some of the largest oil & gas producers, service and construction companies, and technology firms operating in Central Asia. She has an exceptional record of achieving favourable outcomes in cases involving regulatory compliance, environmental liability, and government relations.

Before co-founding ADL Disputes, Dina worked with three major international law firms and served in the world's largest oilfield-services company, where she advised on global regulatory-compliance matters. Her dual background in private practice and industry gives her rare insight into both the strategic and operational aspects of cross-border regulation.

Dina frequently speaks at conferences on regulatory and environmental law and contributes to policy discussions on Kazakhstan's legal reforms. She is recognised by Legal 500 as a Rising Star in Dispute Resolution (Kazakhstan, 2023) and a Next Generation Partner (2025).

She holds a Master of Laws (LL.M.) from the University of Nottingham and a Bachelor of Laws from Kazakh Humanitarian-Law University. Dina is fluent in English and Russian.
